FIGHT IS WON.

Jones Claims Bryan's Election
With States to Spare.

Country Thoroughly Aroused and A Great Landslide Confidently Expected.

Chairman Jones, of the National Democratic Committee, has furnished the Associated Press with the following final statement covering the outlook from his standpoint:

"The fight is won. Bryan and Stevenson will be elected. The Democratic majority in the electoral college will be ample. The Democrats will hold all the states they carried in 1896, with the possible exception of Wyoming. We will also carry New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio and Illinois. The Chairman of the State Committee of California has just wired me that we will carry that State by 10,000 majority."

"In a general way I should say that there will be somewhat of a falling off of Bryan's strength compared with 1896 west of the Mississippi, and that east of the Mississippi he will make overwhelming gains. The campaign has been spirited from the start. The Democrats were somewhat handicapped for want of funds, while the Republicans, as four years ago, had more money than they could use.
The Republicans have endeavored to intimidate laboring men and alarm business men, but not with the fierce oppression they brought to bear in 1896. It is my opinion that intimidation has been a fail-ture this year, and that both workmen and business men will vote according to the dictates of conscience. Of course the trusts, the great aggregations of combined capital, the seekers for franchises in Porto Rico and the Philippines, the promoters and exploiters, generally have spared no effort, and will spare no effort to re-elect Mc-Kinley. It is my firm belief, however, that the electorate can be debauched this year to a sufficient extent to throttle the public will."

"The country is aroused as it has not been since the days preceding the civil war. The existence of the form of government established by the fathers is at stake. Whether the trusts shall govern the country or the country regulate the trusts must be decided. It will be found when the votes are counted that the people have determined with emphasis that the republic must be preserved, that the power of the trusts must be curbed, that the man is to be considered before the dollar, and that the voice of the people cannot be suppressed by attempted intimidation or corruption."

"The States that will vote for Bryan will show that the people have confidence in him from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the northernmost to the southernmost boundaries of the republic."

JAMES K. JONES."

CONGESTION OF LUNGS

Causes Death of Mrs. Davie Near Beverly.

Mrs. Cornelia Davie, widow of the late M. D. Davie, died at her home near Beverly Sunday afternoon of congestion of the lungs. She was about 70 years old and had only been sick ten days. Deceased had been a member of Liberty Christian church for many years and was a lady held in the highest esteem by a large circle of friends.
The funeral was preached at her late residence yesterday by Elder T. D. Moore, of this city, and the interment followed at the Davie burying ground, at Old Genoa.

IN EARNEST.

Business Men Agree to Close Their Houses.

Everybody Will Work For Good Roads, Regardless of Politics
To-Day.

The business men of Hopkinsville have all agreed to close their stores and places of business to-day, in order to let everybody turn out to work for free turnpikes.

This is something never before seen in Hopkinsville and the business men were of one mind on the subject. A committee, made up of representatives of both parties canvassed the city Saturday and there was not a dissenter found.
Side by side the Democrats and Republicans will vote and work for the proposition in which every citizen of the town feels a common interest. Information from the country is very encouraging for the success of the propositions this time.

LATEST REPORTS

Indiana, Kentucky, Kansas And Nebraska Safe For Bryan—
Doubtful States.

New York, Nov. 4.—Ex-Gov. Stone gave out the following as his final prediction to-night:

"The final prediction based on the latest and most accurate reports and information received are that we will carry, of the so-called doubtful States, Indiana, Kentucky, Kansas and Nebraska. We have a good chance of carrying New Jersey and Delaware."

"The battle is on in New York, Illinois and Ohio. If we carry one of these three States Mr. Bryan's election is assured. I am positive we shall not fail to get one of the three. In all three States we have a much better chance than McKinley. I feel certain to-night that we shall carry New York and Illinois.
Of Bryan's election I am to-night absolutely certain without a shadow of doubt."

HELD OVER.

John Boyd Must Answer For Killing Beverly Wright.

The examining trial of John Boyd for killing Beverly Wright at a negro supper at Cerulean several weeks ago, was held before Judge Shaw last Saturday, and after the testimony of about twenty witnesses and the argument of counsel, the accused was held over to February Circuit Court, and his bond fixed at $500, in default of which he was returned to jail, says the Cadiz Record.

OFF FOR ARKANSAS.

Christian County Hunting Club
Will Leave To-morrow.

The Christian County Hunting Club will leave to-morrow morning for the swamps of Arkansas on their annual three weeks' outing.
They will start from Pembroke and will use three cars for the transportation of the outfit to Memphis.
At the latter place they will take a boat for the hunting grounds, and will arrive Friday evening. The party will carry along several wagons, about a dozen horses, forty dogs, several servants, and a full camping outfit. Game is reported very plentiful in the Arkansas bottoms this season and a successful hunt is anticipated.

MASSACRES ALTER HISTORY.

Have Profoundly Altered the History of the United States.

Massacres have profoundly affected the history of the United States, aside from the way in which it was affected by the influx of Huguenots as a consequence of the St. Bartholomew and kindred cruelties in France. The murders of the French Protestants, under Ribault, in Florida, by the Spaniard Menendez in 1565, sent the French to Canada instead of to the south Atlantic coast of the present United States, gave the latter to Spain, and thus made Florida far easier to win by the United States after this country's independence was gained, says the Chicago Daily News.

Devastation along the northern border of New England by the French and Indians in the various intercolonial wars, which ended with 1763, incited the resistance of part of England and its dependencies which drove France out of Canada and the Mississippi valley in that year, and hastened the revolution, which, a dozen years later, expelled England from the 13 colonies, says Leslie's Weekly.

Gnawings on the French in Santo Domingo by the negroes in 1801 and 1802, that island being then a French colony, prevented Bonaparte from sending an army to take possession of New Orleans, which had been retroceded to France by Spain, and was one of the causes of the cession of Louisiana by France to the United States in 1803, which was the first and greatest expansion ever made by this country, and which made all subsequent expansions—Florida, Texas, Oregon, California, New Mexico, Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines—inevitable. Disraeli's assertion in the case of Lincoln, that "assassination has never changed the history of the world," needs to be modified when the assassinations affect a race, a large element of a people, especially when incited by religion or politics.

Vegitarian Peoples.

In India, China and Japan and adjacent countries are about 400,000,000 people who rarely eat meat; yet they are strong, active and long-lived. Darwin is authority for the statement that the Andean natives perform twice the work of ordinary laborers, and subside almost entirely on a diet of bananas.

The Artistic Sense.

The only avenue left for women developing an artistic sense, is in marking with a fork the crust of the pie.—Atchison Globe.

LENDING TO THE POOR.

What Has Been Done in the Way of Municipal Pawnshops.

The English government is considering the adoption of a system of municipal pawnshops, and the question should be agitated in this country. The states in which most attention has been given to the subject are New York and Massachusetts. In the former the legal rate of pawnbrokers' interest on loans less than $100 is three per cent, for the first six months, and two per cent, for month thereafter; in other words, 30 per cent, per annum. Upon household effects and clothing the American pawnbroker lends very little—partly on account of storage; but upon diamonds competition forces the pawnbroker to advance a large proportion of the price that the dealer would pay for them.

It is the opinion of many that institutions that lend small sums on pledges or chattel mortgages on furniture or personal effects are even more useful to the people generally than the banker, says the Arena. The small borrowers outnumber the large ones ten to one. There are dishonest people; but it is the observation of clergymen, missionaries, officers of the Salvation Army and others in like positions that the poor are just as anxious to pay their debts as the more prosperous.

As early as 1859 there was incorporated in Boston a Pawnmen's Bank.

The aim of this institution was to enable the poor to borrow money in small sums on personal effects. After various vicissitudes this became the Capitalist Loan company. Most of their loans are for five dollars each. This company is trying to reach the ideal of the Pawnmen's Bank—namely, for the poor to borrow money on personal property of all kinds on reasonable terms. The loans are for four months at one-half per cent, per month.

The Workingmen's association received its charter from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts on March 8, 1888. This organization was also formed for the purpose of enabling persons to borrow money on furniture and other personal property at low rates. It was designed that they should conduct business, conducted economically at the very lowest rate that would yield a fair return upon the capital invested. One per cent, a month was fixed as the interest rate, and with each payment of interest the payment of an installment of the principal equal to five per cent, of the loan was demanded, thus encouraging borrowers to save and pay off the loan.

Loans have been repaid very fast, averaging from half a year to a year in duration. When illness or misfortune comes the company relaxes its demands, and gives time until circumstances shall improve. Besides the interest at one per cent, a month, an additional charge is made sufficient to cover all expenses in investigating and recording mortgage.

Loans are made on furniture and household effects, insurance policies, indorsed notes, etc., but seldom on jewelry. Each applicant is questioned with great care and fills out a blank application, giving present residence, previous residence and business references, and deposits 35 cents. The company has, of course, met with some losses. Loans on horses, boats, pictures and druggists' sundries have proved unfortunate; but as a rule furniture has been redeemed. As the loan, being only one-fourth of the purchasing price, is small in comparison with the value of the furniture, there is a strong inclination to pay.

A few years ago Dr. Greer started a loan association in New York, and out of this the Provident Loan society was organized to give aid, on a strictly business basis, by the loan of money at one per cent, per month, or one-third the legal charge made by pawnbrokers. As a rule money is loaned on jewelry and other articles representing large value in small bulk. Reports of this association state that those who obtain loans are rarely found on the records of charitable institutions, but are self-supporting persons who desire to live over periods of misfortune or illness. The work is preventive rather than charitable. Less than 2 1/3 per cent, of the loans made in 1896 remained unpaid at the close of the year. This society started with a capital of N. Y. Sun.

A Jury of Idiots.

The late Henry W. Payne, of the Massachusetts bar, was once defending a jury case in which a boy of 13 was charged with arson. He made a strong case to prove the defendant an idiot. After a charge from the judge which was practically an order for acquittal, the jury brought in a verdict of guilty. The judge asked Payne if he would move for a new trial. "I thank you for your suggestion," was the answer, "but I am oppressed with the gravest doubts whether I have the right to move for a new trial. Your honor, I have already asked for and received for my idiot client the most precious heritage of our English and American common law—a trial by a jury of his peers."

A Great Parisian Industry.

No fewer than 7,000 people in Paris are employed in the preparation of human hair for the market. Recently a number of charitable women in Chicago organized a loan association on a small scale. The capital is furnished by contributors, who give from ten to five dollars annually. Loans are made in a business-like manner, the borrower giving his note, countersigned by a responsible guarantor; but the note does not bear interest. Owing to the association's small capital, loans are限于ten dollars and are payable in weekly installments. In the event of illness or other sufficient cause, extensions are granted. A member of the society, summarizing results to date, finds that there are clearly defined sets of conditions where loans may be successfully substituted for alms. The first is in dealing with an element of the respectable poor, applying for relief for the first time, then there is a second class, whose only idea is of giving and taking; to such a class a loan is welcomed with surprise and gratitude; a third class includes the degenerate poor, who expect alms as their right. Such people the association endeavor to help by making them see they have reached pauperism by the alms that have been given them. It is general, etc. A.P. Hardwick.

RETURN OF 'LONZO.

There were four of the boys of the Bar Lazy outfit at the home ranch on Cinnamon when 'Lonzo' Boggs got back. Phil Baker was already in his bunk with his blanket pulled up over his head, as was his evil half; Scotty and Todd Pickley were playing euchre by the light of a stable lantern, in the doorway, where they got the benefit of the breeze, and Len Fuller, with his back turned to them, monopolized the table and the lamp, cutting a bootleg into strings for the braiding of a quirt.

It was delicate work, this cutting, for Lem had no gauge but his eye to guide the leather against the keen edge of the knife blade that had stuck into the pine table, but the thin strip that dangled from the table edge and curled on the floor was even to a hair's breadth, and there had not been a break or a slip from the first cut. To insure this accuracy Fuller worked by breaths, filling his lungs to their fullest capacity with every new hold that he took, and exhausting them in a satisfied sigh as his forefinger glided by the point of division. It was during one of these pauses that the men in the ranch house heard the sound of horses' hoofs approaching the corral at a gallop and then the clatter of the falling bars.

"I reckon that's Pioche got back," remarked Todd, "an' he hain't found them cayuses neither. That means I've got to hit the trail for Ragged Top bright and early to-morrow." There was a jingle of spurs on the gravel, and a tall figure loomed out of the darkness and dropped a saddle and blanket at the door. Without a word to the two men on the step it strode over their cards and smote the absorbed leather worker between the shoulders, causing him to cut his string across and knocking his nose on the haft of the knife.

Puller started to his feet, with a glare in his eye that meant mischief, but as soon as he saw his assailant, he was sworn an oath of pleased surprise, and the staggering blow that he dealt in return was in pure friendliness and affection.

"I'll be burnd if it ain't Boggs!" he exclaimed. "Why, you long-legged, sway-backed old dog robber! I reckoned the stranglers had got you a year ago." Scotty told me that you was hung in Guyanas last fall for stealing a burro from a blind Mexican. Didn't you tell me that, Scotty?"

"Si," answered Scotty. "That was what they were sayin', an' I took it for true talk. Where you been hidin' out, 'Lonzo'?"

"Bring in my saddle an' I'll tell you," replied Boggs, settling himself on one of the bunks. "I see old Red-eye is still champin' hay. Who's ridin' him now? Barker says I can take him on my string. I met Barker in Magdalene Tuesday, an' he told me he couldn't run the outfit without I rode for him this season, so I concluded I'd help him out. That's what brought me down here; I was fiddlin' on pullin' my freight for the Gila."

Todd dragged in the newcomer's saddle and threw it on the others that were heaped in one corner of the room, and while he was doing this Boggs pulled out of his bunk by one leg and sat on him until he was awakened sufficiently to recognize and greet him. Then the four settled themselves comfortably down, and 'Lonzo' rolled a cigarette and told the brief story of his wanderings as he smoked.

"I went back home after I left here," he said, "back to God's country, in old Salina county, Mo. I didn't know but I might conclude to stay there if I could find a layout that suited me, but I didn't, an' I lit out."

Worked up the Platte an' rode for the Jerrings' outfit, but they're a lot of shorthorners there. They sale their game, I reckon, but it ain't my game. Farm hands—not a puncher on the ranch—an' farm hands' wages. Then I broke for the Little Missouri country, an' I might have stayed there for awhile if I hadn't a miserandostin' with the man I was workin' for. As it was, I beat him up a mess an' brought up in Cheyenne. Bally Gilman is in Cheyenne now, runnin'

a saloon. If Tom Hartigan wants his son on his log pole as bad as he did when I was here, all he's got to do is to hike up to Cheyenne an' get it. He's the same old Baldy; anybody can get his game."

"Tom didn't appear to ache for it when he was in this section," observed Todd. "You'd have had to rope him to get him within rifle range of old man Gilman after Cerillos. It took him time to get his mad in workin' in order."

"Well," resumed Boggs, "I drifted down into the Box Butt country last spring, and worked for Tolman, and I got to Magdalena three weeks ago an' went against everything there in the burg until I got strapped. Barker had to make me a cause to take him time to get his mad in workin' in order."

"I think you must be locoed, too," said Fuller. "You need a guardien if you want to go back, when she feels that way about you."

"But she don't," said Boggs, eagerly.

"I know she don't. She couldn't after what she's said to me, an' after —no woman could—an' yet I don't know. You remember what you said awhile back: 'She thinks that there's only one man while he's Johnny-on-the-spot.' That was me. That's what I want to be all the time." I guess she got tired. I run it into the ground. But I couldn't help it."

"Just to be near her an' watch her an' her pretty ways—the turn of her head, an' her smile." I've thought of em' every hour for this year. Yes, I'm locoed, all right. Course I couldn't help it, when she told me she loved me, an' I was the only one, how was I to know that there was any need to?"

"Why didn't you get down to cases?" asked Fuller.

"I did," answered the despairing lover. "I thought I was all right. I was going to buy a little business in the town an' settle down, but there was opposition."

"Another honoree took chips?"

"Another! There was more than you've got fingers and toes, an' she smiled on 'em all. That was where I laid down. I guess she didn't understand how it was. She was high, low, jack an' the game to me. There wasn't another card in the deck I wanted to fill my hand. But she would draw to me every round, an' I couldn't stand for it. I made the bluff that if she wanted to make that play I quit cold."

"Did she call you?"

"Sure thing. I was a durned fool to make it, but if I had to do it again, I'd do it. What would I want with a girl that I wasn't enough for? All the same I was a fool. It ought to have been enough for me just to take my turn an' set around an' look at her. I was a fool to think that a girl like her would want to tie to a daddy like me. I believe, after all, though, she would have an' she was square. I do one minute, an' the next I don't. When it comes to a show down, I wasn't there. Ever wear one of these mustard plasters next to your hide-an' grit your teeth an' wonder how much longer you could stand with it? That's the way it is with me. What'd you do if you was me, Lem?"

"Do you want me to tell you?" asked Fuller, rising. "I'll tell you, then. I'd go back an' find out how the game stood an' make up my mind to take the best I could get without kickin'." Or I'd take about grass ropes an' hunt a likely tree. As near as I can stack it up, the girl will miss trouble if you leave her alone. A man has got to have some sense to make a girl happy. Little Mercedes will suit you. That's the kind of a woman you want—a Mexican woman."

"How is she?" asked Boggs, with marked carelessness.

"As pretty as ever, an' she hasn't forgot 'Lonzo' Boggs. She asks me every time I go down to the hacienda whether I've had any word from you. What made you drift down, here, Lem?"

"I wanted to see you boys again an' I happened to meet Barker."

"You're a durned liar," declared Fuller with emphasis. "You're a durned liar an' a durned fraud. You came down here to hunt up Mercedes. On the square now?"

"Well, maybe I did," owned Alonso. —Chicago Record.

for I couldn't cash in an' quit, as I've done afore—not in a million years. Lem, I'd give my hand to know how I stand to-day. It's a year since I seen her, an' it seems like it was a lifetime. She's pullin', pullin' at me all the time, night an' day, an' I can't find rest nor ease nowhere. Right now I'm in the notion to go back an' five minutes from now I say to myself: 'You're locoed, 'Lon Boggs, you're plum crazy to think of a woman that don't care two whoops about you one way or another. Or if she does, it's to you way you'll stay away!'

"I think you must be locoed, too," said Fuller. "You need a guardien if you want to go back, when she feels that way about you."

"But she don't," said Boggs, eagerly.

"I know she don't. She couldn't after what she's said to me, an' after —no woman could—an' yet I don't know. You remember what you said awhile back: 'She thinks that there's only one man while he's Johnny-on-the-spot.' That was me. That's what I want to be all the time." I guess she got tired. I run it into the ground. But I couldn't help it."

"Just to be near her an' watch her an' her pretty ways—the turn of her head, an' her smile." I've thought of em' every hour for this year. Yes, I'm locoed, all right. Course I couldn't help it, when she told me she loved me, an' I was the only one, how was I to know that there was any need to?"

"Why didn't you get down to cases?" asked Fuller.

A PEEP INTO AN ADOBE HUT.

Picturesque Life of the Indian People of Mexico.

Beneath the cloudless skies of Mexico and skirting its suburbs and villages, stand myriad of modest little huts. They are all made of adobe—sun-dried bricks—and are the dwellings of the Indians, who fashion them from large pieces of clay which are left to dry or bake in the sun, says Amelie Ursula Mignerez, in Good Housekeeping. When the clay is thoroughly dry and hard the bricks are placed upon a small patch of ground—the site of the hut to be erected, and the simple and primitive process begins.

No foundation is dug; the bricks are laid down one over the other with soft clay plaster between them. When a square has been built up and reaches the height of a tall man, the roof is put on, and this is done sometimes by means of laths covered over with adobe bricks and sometimes by thatching. On one side of the hut an opening is left for a door, which is generally composed of a screen made from rushes depending from the roof.

The ordinary adobe house boasts of but one room, but in the case of a well-to-do Indian who earns a few more centavos than his neighbor, the house will contain an extra apartment. A floor and a window are strangers to this habitation. Heaven's golden sunlight can but creep in at the door. The ground-clay is well smoothed and stamped upon, so that in time it becomes hard enough to be misted for stone.

The furniture consists of two, or at the most three, gay colored petates, or straw mats, which serve for beds, a few rush chairs, the indispensable brasero, which is a small, portable charcoal stove, several shelves that hold the cooking utensils, which are almost exclusively of earthenware, a few plain prints tacked on the walls, and last, but not least, a bundle of straw in the most comfortable corner of the hut for the chief member of the family—the burro, who shares alike the joys and sorrows of his master.

A sleepy and uninteresting group one would find and remark on at first sight of the inmates of one of these huts—the coffee-colored mother-rocking to and fro the sleeping nizito on her breast, the indolent-looking father stretched at full length at her feet, and the two or three children sitting in the doorway munching sugar cane; but let a wandering minstrel appear with his guitar, the scene will be transformed, and the magic instrument will call into life the dreamy little household, and even the tiny babe will crow with joy at the sound of the music.

As among the lower classes of European countries there is a set fashion of dress, so among the Indians of Mexico a style prevails which is both quaint and attractive. The mistress of the adobe mansion presents a gay appearance in her striped petticoat of yellow, red and black, her snowy-white chemise, and the reboso of many colors so gracefully entwined about her head and shoulders. Should it be a holiday, then, a massive necklace of variegated beads will adorn her neck, and large gold hoops will deck her ears. Her lord and master is quite an Adonis in her admiring eyes, in his loose white trousers and bright red serape or shoulder-blanket, and his large straw sombrero, which is a grace known only to the American Indian.

The children are dressed in much the same style as their parents, and often look like little old men and women as they play about the doorway of the huts, shyly peeping out at a chance passerby, who, if he happens to be a tourist, will be much amused at the stray glimpse he takes of an adobe dwelling and its inmates.

Roadside Fruit.

In Luxembourg the practice of planting fruit trees along the public roads is extensively carried out, the principal being apples, pears, peaches and cherries. It was started in 1870, and there are now 12,308 trees. Before the fruit is ripe it is sold by auction. During the first 20 years this undertaking was unprofitable, but from 1891 it began to pay, when the crop was sold for $160, whilst last year the sale price was something approaching £2,000, or an income of about 3s. a tree.

It is all over but the voting and the shooting.

Remember the polls close at 4 o'clock and your watch may be slow.

Col. Bryan closed his campaign in Chicago Saturday night and spent yesterday in his own State.

A cold rain interfered greatly with the Republican rally in New York Saturday and it was not up to expectations.

Grover Cleveland has gone off to Maryland to hunt ducks on election day. Grover is himself about the deadest duck he will encounter on his rounds.

Anna Gould's husband, Count De Castellane, in four years has squandered $3,000,000 of his wife's fortune above her income of $600,000 a year, and the French courts have appointed Geo. J. Gould to act as agent for his sister.

We are in receipt of the 27th annual edition of the Latham Alexander & Co.'s "Cotton / Movement and Fluctuations," covering a period of six years. This year's edition of the book is by far the handsomest they have ever issued and the volume is replete with useful information to those interested in cotton.

Ellis M. Headley, son of John W. Headley, a former Democrat of Louisville, was arrested in Paducah Saturday, charged with bribery. He was trapped by Wm. Baker, a Democratic detective, who secured $150 of the fund sent to Paducah to be used against the Democratic ticket. Baker gave a receipt, which was found on Headley when he was searched after his arrest. Headley gave bond for $1,000. His conviction is almost certain, as Baker employed a go-between and both men will testify. It is said Headley had $6,000 of bribe money to be turned loose against Wheeler.

The Democratic Campaign in Christian county has been conducted with vigor and intelligence. Opening party headquarters was a new feature and 1400 callers have registered their names in the big book prepared for the purpose. This feature has been of great benefit in organizing the county. The party has at all times been short of speakers, but the few who placed themselves at the disposal of the committee have done faithful service. The band-wagon campaign originating in this county proved to be a great scheme and was adopted in many other counties of the States. The party enters the voting contest to-day, well organized, enthusiastic and sanguine, but handicapped by a total lack of funds. The burdens of the campaign must be borne by volunteer workers inspired by patriotic motives.

The November number of the Review of Reviews marks the culmination of the presidential campaign of 1900. Its various departments—"The Progress of the World," "Record of Current Events," "Cartoons," and "Leading Article of the Month"—summarize the things worth remembering in connection with the political contests of the year in the United States, Canada, and Great Britain, while contributed articles describe in detail the campaign methods employed in Chicago, New York, and London, and the rudimentary party organizations of Porto Rico. Its editorial treatment of current politics has given the Review a unique distinction among American magazines.

A vote for Yerkes is a vote in favor of Taylor's bloody and corrupt record, for Yerkes stands upon a platform endorsing the usurper's crimes.

FINE WEATHER

Weather Bureau at Washington
Announces Conditions as Favorable.

Washington, Nov.—The Weather Bureau to-night issued the following:

"Sunday, Nov. 4, 1900, 10 p. m.—Special forecast for Tuesday Nov. 6, 1900:

"For the first time in ten days the weather map shows a clear sky over the whole region from the Pacific to the Atlantic, except over a small area on the middle Atlantic coast, where some rain is falling as a result of a severe storm, the center of which is off Hatteras. The pressure is high over the western half of the country.

"These conditions will surely give clear, fair weather and pleasant temperatures in all States on Monday, except possibly showers on the immediately middle Atlantic coast line. While it is possible for a storm to develop somewhere in this broad area by Tuesday, the conditions are unusually favorable for the continuation of the fine weather of Monday over to and throughout Tuesday.

HOWARD'S RELEASE.

Mob If Gov. Beckham is Elected,
Pardon If Yerkes Wins.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 3.—A state officer to-day received a letter from a friend in Eastern Kentucky requesting him to notify the officials of the city of Frankfort to be on the lookout for another visit from the mountaineers. The writer says that since the conviction of Jim Howard for the murder of Gov. Goebel, Howard's friends have been quietly working to get together a mob of men in Clay and adjoining counties to come to Frankfort and release him in the event of the election of Gov. Beckham.

Howard a day or two ago told Robt. Triplett, of this city, that he was an innocent man and that if Yerkes was elected governor that he would be a free man within fifteen days after his inauguration.

In view of the above report both Howard and Powers were by order of Judge Cantrill removed to-day to the Louisville jail for safe keeping.

DIVORCE PETITION

Among First Suits Filed for Next Term.

Among the first suits filed with the Circuit Clerk for the next term of Court was one for divorce. The style of the suit is Jennie Sims vs. Pete Sims. The petition states that they were married in Pulaski, Tenn., five years ago, but now reside in this county. Plaintiff alleges that defendant has failed to suitably provide for her maintenance and has treated her in a cruel and unmerciful manner, etc. An absolute divorce is asked and also the custody of their only child, a daughter three years old.

OFFERED $50

Charge of a Colored Politician Against a Republican Official.

A negro man from one of the country precincts was in last week and reported at Democratic headquarters that he had a club of 40 colored voters who wanted to vote the Democratic ticket. He said he had been offered $50 by a Republican county officer to "work" for the Republicans on election day and keep the men in line. He was told that the Democrats were not bidding for votes and that he was free to accept the $50 proposition. His name will be given to the next grand juries, state and federal.

"The Prince of the World" Will be Presented.

"The Prince of the World" company, which appears at the Opera House to-morrow evening, is a play on the order of "Quo Vadis" and "Sign of the Cross." Hal Reed and Miss Westbrook have written what some say is a much stronger play than either of them. The cast is a very strong one and embraces the names of Charles Mylott, Will S. Rising, Jules Kusell, Lillian Kemble, Virginia Westbrook, Rubye Rothwell, Ellen Lee Bigler and others. The company carries its own special scenery. An invitation has been issued to all the ministers to attend the performance to-morrow evening.

To All Hopkinsville Ministers:

Dear Sir—On the evening of Nov. 7 we have the great Christian play, "The Prince of the World," at the Opera House and would be glad to have you witness the production of the same, free. By presenting this at the door you will be gladly admitted.

Yours truly,

BECKHAM RALLY

A Monster Affair Last Friday Afternoon.

Tabernacle Filled To Overflowing — Parade a Mile Long.

The final Democratic rally of the campaign Friday was a distinct success in every way.

Gov. Beckham arrived from Guthrie at 10:45 on late train. Hon. A. G. Caruth and Mr. Hal Corbett had previously come over the I.C. and a parade was made through the principal streets that occupied most of the time till noon.

The procession of carriages, horsemen and footmen was a mile long and was participated in by several hundred enthusiastic Democrats.

The Governor's party dined at Hotel Latham and the speaking began shortly after 1 o'clock, the big Tabernacle being crowded to the doors.

The Governor was introduced by Mr. Chas. M. Ceacham and spoke for an hour. He was given the closest attention by the splendid and enthusiastic audience. His voice rang out clearly and distinctly over the crowd. He asserted with emphatic earnestness the legality and justice of his title to the governorship and that of the subordinate State officers. His recounting of the iniquitous acts of the Republican leaders, having their consultation in Gov. Goebel's assassination, was delivered in an unpassioned manner, but with such directness of statement of unquestioned facts that the crowd was profoundly impressed. Closing his recital of the tragic and stirring events of last winter in Frankfort, he said that he had asked Mr. Yerkes to state whether he would give pardons to those convicted of the murder of Gov. Goebel, and, further, whether he would ask for re-examinations for those indicted for complicity in the assassination. Mr. Yerkes, Gov. Beckham said, had never answered the question, but he would by saying that Mr. Yerkes, if elected Governor, would pardon every man convicted of connection in the assassination and then bring Taylor and Finley back to the State under the escort of his staff and militia.

Gov. Beckham said that if he were elected Governor he would issue requisitions for the accused and bring them back to the State, accompanied by the officers of the law, to answer to the Commonwealth for the crimes charged against them.

No speaker ever faced a more enthusiastic crowd. At times the cheering was so vociferous that pandemonium reigned and the Governor was forced to wait for silence.

When he concluded there was a general rush for the platform before the next speaker could be introduced. After several hundred people had shaken his hand, the people were forced back and Mr. Caruth began his speech. Shortly afterwards Gov. Beckham left and was taken on a visit to the asylum. Outside the Tabernacle he encountered another big crowd that nearly tore his clothes off before he could finally reach his carriage. The speaking was continued by Mr. Caruth and Mr. Corbett until nearly 4 o'clock.

The Governor left on the 5:27 train for Guthrie, where a night meeting was held.

LAST SPEECHES.

Democratic Campaign Closed With Several Ad-dresses.

Every Available Speaker On The Stump In The Wind Up.

Dr. W. G. Wheeler spoke at Bainbridge Friday night to a big crowd. C. H. Bush spoke at Mt. Zoar Friday night and had an enthusiastic audience.

Jas. B. Allessworth filled an appointment at Union Hall, north of Fairview, Saturday night and had a crowded house.

John C. Duffy spoke at Laytonville Saturday night and found Democrats in that section in fine shape.

The following appointments for last night, closed the campaign:

C. H. Bush, at Howell.

W. G. Wheeler, at Concord.

J. C. Duffy, at Perry's School House.

J. B. Allessworth, at Bennettstown.

ABOUT THE RALLY.

Honor Accords to Whom Honor is Due.

Lafayette, Ky. Oct. 30.—We believe in according honor to whom honor is due. Therefore we wish to say a word or two in reference to the report in to-day's KENTUCKIAN of the Democratic Rally here Saturday evening last.

The Democratic Club, of Bennettstown, joined with us in getting up the Rally and contributed their share towards making it the grandest demonstration of the kind Lafayette has ever held. Therefore we think the leaders of that club, C. S. Coleman, J. R. Brane, Robt. King, Jno. Stevenson, T. D. McGee, W. G. Fox and others are entitled to as much honor as those mentioned in the article referred to above.

The Club at Bennettstown is doing good work in the grand cause of Democracy and on the 6th day of November they will be found at the post of duty, and will help redeem our beloved state from the shame and disgrace brought upon her by the usurper Taylor and his followers. Respectfully, C. B. F.

It's Easy To Take

"CIVIL LIBERTY."

Wholesale Plan of Corrupting the Officers of Election Balked.

Ellis Headley, an "Honest Election" Agent, Caught Red-handed in Paducah.

Paducah, Ky., Nov. 3.—A very severe blow was struck at "civil liberty" to-day. An "Honest election League" agent will suffer disqualification, serve a term in jail and pay a comfortable sum, all for "civil liberty," of the kind talked so much about by Republican orators and newspaper organs of assassination.

Ellis Headley, an authorized agent of the "Honest Election League," erstwhile an organizer for the Middle-of-the-road Populists, and son of John W. Headley, general manager of the so-called Brown Democracy headquarters in Louisville, was arrested for attempted bribery of election officers. He was caught red-handed, and with a roll of bills on him about as big as a stove-pipe, and the documentary evidence at hand that clinches the matter beyond question.

Last Monday Congressman Wheeler and Assistant Secretary of State Harry G. Tandy got information that Headley was headed for the First district and laid for him, into which he walked, with all ease. Will Baker, an election inspector, a sharp, shrewd man and a Democrat of the strictest integrity, was put on his trail. Baker met Headley and let him know he was an inspector for election day, and remarked that "there was not much doing." Headley exhibited to him a big roll of bills and said: "That's what we are doing business with," and then confided to Baker his business of finding officers who would falsify the count.

Major Lang, of the Democratic committee, then wrote a letter to Baker, telling him of his appointment and asking him to recommend men as inspectors in certain wards of the city. This Baker showed to Headley and the latter then and there paid Baker $150, for which Baker gave a receipt, keeping a copy, stating that the money was paid in consideration of his appointing such inspectors as Headley wanted.

To get still further proof on Headley, some other inspectors were steered up against him, and in the midst of his transactions with the police, having witnessed the whole proceeding by arrangement, quietly stepped in and arrested Headley. He gave bond for his appearance.

The proof for Headley's offense is ninety days in jail, $100 fine and disbarment.

Headley's arrest, it is believed, has entirely upset a plan for the wholesale corruption of election officers in this and other cities of the First district. It also seems to thoroughly expose the "Honest Election League" and Mid-road Populist annexes of the Republican party.

and healthfulness of its ingredients.

Royal Baking Powder leavens the food perfectly by its own inherent power without changing or impairing any of the elements of the flour.

Thus the hot-breads, hot-rolls and muffins, and the delicious hot griddle-cakes raised by the Royal Baking Powder are wholesome and digestible, and may be eaten without distress, even by persons of delicate digestion.

Alum baking powders are low priced, as alum costs but two cents a pound; but alum is a corrosive poison and it renders the baking powder dangerous to use in food.

FIVE DOLLAR GOLD PIECES.

Given For Nickels to a Negro at Morganfield.

Morganfield, Ky., Nov. 3.—Yesterday a negro workman of Union town, Ky., after finishing a job of work at which he had earned a silver dollar, presented this to the cashier of the Pike Morgan Banking company, asking for small change. The cashier, mistaking a package of five dollar gold pieces for a roll of nickels, handed over the roll of gold. The negro got together several congenial companions and enjoyed the spree of his life. He has since been arrested, though the bank officials are puzzled to determine what kind of a charge to bring against him.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities from the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Over-work and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or uneasy heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-stagnant blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all common diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and extraordinary effects of Dr. Kilmer's Swan Root, the great kidney remedy, are soon realized.

It stands the highest for its wonderful cure of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty cities.

You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have any kidney trouble.

Send to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

SIGNS OF GROWING OLD.

A Bachelor Clubman Tells of His Petty Insecurities with Servants.

"Petty insecurities toward servants is a sure sign that one is growing old," remarked a bachelor clubman, "and I find myself developing it more and more every day. It is an infirmity that I have always abhorred, but, strange to say, the very efforts I make to fight it down render me unjust and keep me in perpetual hot water. I am breakfasting, for example, and find my omelette a shade underdone. That trifling incident throws me into a childish rage; but I remember myself, and, by a strong effort, refrain from cussing the waiter. When I leave the table I am still fuming inwardly and badly in need of a safety valve to blow off my surplus choler; so, when a poor little newsboy runs up and offers me a paper, I dash it aside and bellow 'Not' in a voice that frightens him nearly to death. That fills me with remorse, and, while I am still in a pensive frame of mind, an impudent lout of a beggar stops me to demand a nickel, and immediately gets a quarter. As soon as I give him the coin I realize that I ought to have given him a cuff, and the thought of my weakness plunges me into another passion. By that time I have reached my office. 'Curse the lazy scoundrel!' I mutter to myself, and, still thinking of the mendicant, I proceed to kick the cat. I might continue the chain of incidents all day," the clubman went on, ruefully, "but I have told you enough to show you how it goes. In trying honestly to hold my miserable temper in check I am continually dealing out rewards and punishment to the wrong people. I gave the newsboy the reward intended for the waiter; and, when I paid him the quarter intended for the news-boy, and I gave the coffee cat the kick intended for the beggar. The waiter and the newsboy and the coffee cat look on me, very properly, as a brute. The other day one of my victims attempted to readjust things on an equitable basis, but only succeeded in making a bad mess worse. Some trifling blunder of the negro porter at our place had thrown me into a fury and I relieved myself by savagely abusing one of our Irish teamsters for being a few seconds late. In a moment I realized my injustice and sought to make amends. 'Mike,' I said, 'I had no right to speak to you as I did. I am very sorry. I was out of temper at the stupidity of that darky, Pete, and—well, I hardly knew what I was saying.' Mike scratched his head. 'Then you meant it for the nigger?' he asked, gravely. 'Yes,' said I. 'All right,' said he, and, going down into the basement, he walked up to Pete and hit him in the eye. Pete is still trying to find out why he got smashed."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

The Republican who is fond of talking about the suffrage qualifications in North Carolina, should turn his eyes to Oregon. The Oregon Constitution contains the following section:

"No negro or mulatto, not residing in this state at the time of the adoption of this constitution, shall come, reside, or be within this state, or hold any real estate, or make any contracts, or maintain any suit therein; and the Legislature shall provide by penal laws for the removal by public officers of all such negroes and mulattoes, and for their effectual exclusion from the state, and for the punishment of persons who shall bring them into the state or employ or harbor them."

The other mixes the same powders with grease, making a substance called "grease paint."

"It is a mistaken idea that actresses are as a general rule handsome on the stage than off," writes Franklin Fyles, of "The Theatres and Its People" in the March Ladies' Home Journal. "The reverse is as likely to be true. Nevertheless, all theatrical faces have to be painted. It may be assumed safely that none of the complexion is genuine. An exceptionally clear and pink skin may require no falsity. A dark one may chance to suit the character to be assumed. But these exceptions to the rule are rare. The glare of artificial light would make most faces ghostly white or unpleasantly yellow if bright hues were not laid on. The art of coloring a pretty one which all actresses should learn. Many do not, and so we see beauty disfigured instead of enhanced. Others are very expert. There are two distinct processes. One makes use of colored powders applied dry. The other mixes the same powders with grease, making a substance called "grease paint."

OUR MEN OF PURPOSE.

What has the country boy to say
Of country boys that "serve their way"?
The strong, hardy sons at the mills,
Nods toward the homestead with a smile,
Points to the plow, the field, the mire,
The farm, the forest, the mine,
And tells with pride how from the far,
A Lincoln's sturdy voice and arm,
A George Washington's might,
A Whittier's prophetic sight.
The faith of Grant and Washington
Our country's sons have shown,
And strengthened in its trial hour,
The bulwarks of our country's power.

What has the city boy to tell
Of city boys who served us well?
He has a story to tell, a song
Renowned in story and in song,
A thousand who have "served their way".

What has the man to say
Who tells how from the town there came
A Franklin's never-ending fame,
A Lincoln's strength and nerve,
The genius of an Everett's fame,
Beneath the city's roofs and domes,
There sprang the peerless sons of Hobbes,

The learned professors of Hobbes,
The eloquence of Phillips Brooks.

What, then, brave toiler in the town,
Strong plowboy, in the pasture brown!
When youthful purpose only sees Evil, and only evil can set,

John effort, like men of old,

To speed the common Age of Gold;

John effort, to serve his God,

To seek the purest joys of life;

John hands together, and be brave!

The world's poor, the wretched, the sick,

Whatever dross and doubtless say,

Be men of purpose, boys, to-day.

Managing a Sick Husband

"WELL, if she treats him like that I won't answer for the consequences," replied Mrs. J. Matrimonial Bliss, laying down her lace work and shaking her head so sadly that it seemed as though she could hardly hold it up. "I'm telling him its summer waves before the sun sets on the land where she and Miss Emily Loney sat gossiping."

"For my part, I think she is a very tender, devoted wife, and he's a surly brute," retorted Miss Emily. "The partitions in these summer hotels are so thin I could hear every word he said without a feather being set, and she replied, in the gentlest ways: 'Dear, you aren't well,' and then his language became perfectly awful. I simply put my fingers in my ears. I can't help thinking how in the past few days all her ideals must have become shattered by his behavior, and she has been ill ever since—just a few months. Men are such treacherous creatures. Sometimes one does appreciate a woman's dignified independence," and Miss Emily gave her water color version of his majesty the Atlantic, a moon that looked like a white celluloid poker chip gone astray.

Miss Emily said: "It isn't a bad idea, Miss Emily. He's just a little run down, poor, young man, and his confiding, adoring, pretty little wife evidently hasn't got far enough along in her knowledge of the sex to realize that there is a mighty big difference in the best methods of taking care of a sick wife. She doesn't know that we all know that a woman wants to be cuddled and cooed, petted and fussed over when she is ill. She grows quite fond of her medicines, loves to tuck up among pillows and discuss her symptoms, and speak in a still, small voice, and make large, pathetic eyes at her doctor gaze at her relations, and the doctor, too."

"If there is one insult that a man more neatly resents than another," Mrs. Bliss continued, "it is illness, and he deeply objects to being reminded of it. He knows that he is then unarmed and more or less an object of amusement to his own sex, so a sick husband is a most hateful sight. It is wisely tact that saves him, and that is what our little friend should learn. She really is painfully obtuse. Last night she tried to put her white worsted shawl about his big, broad shoulders, made him change his seat, because she knew he was in a draught, and reminded him of it again right before all the other men. Deyon wonder he used winged words; that is to say, direct colloquial language; though, being newly married, he spoke in a tone only she could hear and compiled with all her requests except the use of the shawl. In consequence, she was angry and her blue eyes grew pink, and then he got mad and cut, by way of revenge, and stamped up and down the wet beach, reveling, no doubt, in the knowledge that she was wringing her hands on the planks and longing to rush out and on her knees to offer him his overshoes, but her face was a picture of his manly wrath held her at bay."

"And you think that kind and tender and noble soul—" began Miss Emily Loney, in wrathful amaze.

"No, Miss Emily," chuckled Mrs. Bliss; "it's his masculine and natural, and I've been all through it with my John. Did I ever tell you about the time that John Matrimonial Bliss, Esq., became a widower, and his wife spoke and retired without, come down with the German measles?"

Miss Emily shook her head.

"He doesn't dream to this day that he ever was the victim of so pesky a little ailment, but sometimes, when he chooses to reminds about his wonderful escapes and daring adventures, he will say, 'I've got the German measles again.'"

"Oh, she will find it out by and by," assured Mrs. J. M. Bliss, rising with hungry alacrity. "There is no school for sharpening a woman's wit like joining the big class in matrimony!"—Globe-Democrat.

"We last familiar phase that always leads to some sort of an attack with the skin, and as the disease spreads, even pale hills or dimpled tiny cones, began to excuse me, Miss Emily—but to curse things. Then I knew John was ill, and the crisis came when he got into a perfectly towering rage with the end of a palm leaf that tickled his nose while he sat reading his book upon the sofa. He stopped and removed the pain, and when the racking headache developed I lightly suggested the hot weather, a touch of possible malaria and invited the doctor in to tea.

"Well, the long and short of it was John spent four days in bed, and I covered myself with glory trying to keep my lord in spirits, and at the same time in my room. We never once let on it was measles; that would have hurt his dignity, so the doctor and I talked on a basis of individual symptoms, and I worked overwork, and alarmed him in obedience, while I kept up his courage by wondering at his superb constitution. Poor Jack, he was scared into fits at the sight of his temperature for manlike, once persuaded he is ill, the glooms over the universe, and I could easily have had him sent back by watching him with pained, anxious eyes, by tiptoeing around the room, tickling his poor pulse, pleading with him to eat, hushing all normal, familiar sounds, and begging him every ten minutes to tell me how he felt.

A man of that temperament is a masterpiece in either end of his bed, or puts him into alternate nervous chills and fevers of sheer fright. The proper nursing for one's husband is to make his sick room look cheerful and agreeable, walk around as if there was nothing to be afraid of and speak in a pleasant, buoyant tone of voice.

Glory, when he gets down in the month for manlike his constitution to be impugned any more than his honesty or his courage, and by proving to him that, though it suffers terrible strains, it comes out always ahead, you can flatter and stimulate him to his great strength. When the time comes for the nasty doctor, however, to decide it with all the naughty words in his vocabulary. It helps him, he thinks, and then, when it goes down with a whoop and a gurgle and more language and facial contortions, assure him you don't see how he does it, that being a woman would pain him over the ordeal, and then he lies back,

A Terrible Storm.

Some 30 years ago St. Thomas, a Danish island in the Caribbean sea, was visited by a terrific hurricane which was fearfully destructive to property. From the long bay, or arm of the sea, at the head of which the chief city of the island was built, the waters of the bay receded for nearly a mile. Then a tidal wave of 50 or 60 feet high came in tearing ships and steamers from their anchorage and landing one large vessel on the hillside, 40 or 50 feet above the water level, where it remained, a monumental trophy of the storm.

Women Who Wear Well.

It is astonishing how a few years will change the appearance and disposition of women. The freshness, the charm, and brilliancy can be lost from a woman's face which has been properly handled.

The matron is only a dim shadow, a faint echo of the charming maiden. There are two reasons for this change, ignorance and neglect. Few women appreciate the shock the system which receives through marriage. Many failed to deal with the important function which are often consequent on marriage and motherhood not understanding that this secret drain is robbing the cheek of its freshness and the form of its fairness. As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the digestive, respiratory organs, so too when these organs are established in health the face and fact at once witness to the fact in renewed comeliness. Half a million women and more have found health and happiness in the use of Dr. Pierce's favorite prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

GROWS IN SEALED FLASK.

A Cactus in the Botanical Garden at Berlin.

In the botanical gardens of Berlin is to be seen a cactus which has grown for seven years in a glass flask sealed by fusion; it was presented by a German pharmacist, Ludwig Rust.

He explains the growth of the plant by the fact that the soil in which it grows contains a certain quantity of spores of fungi, which germinate from time to time and cover the sides of the flask with a greenish layer. These, in dying, furnish the carbonic acid necessary for the life of the cactus. This explanation appeared satisfactory at first, but it was then asked from whence came the carbonic acid for the fungi; again, the phenomena of nutrition which take place in the green parts of the plant require an excess of carbonic acid. This seems, in fact, to be furnished by the process of purification which takes place in the soil. Another question which is more difficult to answer is the origin of the water which is necessary to maintain the life of the plant; this may be derived from the decomposition of the cellulose. However these questions may be answered, the fact remains that the plant lives and develops in a hermetically closed flask. The experiment is not difficult to carry out, and its study may lead to interesting results.—Scientific American.

WOMAN MAIL CARRIER.

Twice a Week Plucky Sarah M. Burks Travesses Wild, Desolate Region on Horseback.

Miss Sarah M. Burks is probably the only woman mail carrier in the west, and her route is one of the most desolate conceivable. From St. John's to Jimtown, A. T., she travels twice a week, covering a distance of 200 miles, as the towns are 52 miles apart. The country is practically a wilderness, the settlers being few and far between.

It would be difficult to imagine a more uninviting region than that to your wife. Remember she is just as sweet as when you used to hold her hand and look into her eyes and tell her how you love her, your heart's delight. Half the pettulance and disease that makes you so irritable comes from Indigestion. You can cure it by taking Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepson. It is guaranteed by C. K. Wyls.

BACK OF HIS STARTING POINT.

The crooked streets of Boston are always a source of wonder to visitors. A C. T. H. is the name of the street.

Tremont house, made up his mind to go out to see the "Hub." As he had three hours at his disposal, he wandered around leisurely but aimlessly until he was tired with his long walk. He calculated that he must have covered nearly ten miles when he stepped back into Tremont house.

"Well, sir," said the policeman, courteously, "you might cut across the street to the front door, but if I were you, I'd walk over the crossing."

He was exactly opposite the hotel.

THE BENGAL LANCERS.

All England is Proud of the Bravery Displayed by Them on the March to Peking.

The magnificent performance of the Bengal lancers, the march of the allied forces to Peking, has drawn attention to the splendid soldiers of which England's Indian forces are composed. Ever since Lady Butler painted her famous picture, Tent-pegs, the Bengal lancers have appealed to the mind of the British public as one of the finest regiments in the army. There is little doubt that for perfect discipline and for supreme courage they have few equals in the world.

But, says London Black and White, although less known to the majority of stay-at-home Britons, the other regiments of our native army are none the less deserving of our admiration. Most of them, like the Afghans and Sikhs in the northwest and the Gurkhas in the northeast, were originally our enemies, and it is the mutual respect born of many a hard tussle that has led to the excellent relations subsisting between Native forces and the British.

Husband well, we can't get along.

It is the best preparation for motherhood.

Prescription is perfectly safe.

The sensitive feminine organism gives it a natural immunity to disease. It banishes anxiety and fear. It is awfully sweet.

The misery of morning sickness. It gives vitality and elasticity to the organs peculiarly affected by pregnancy. It makes of motherhood easy and brief. It makes healthy mothers capable of nursing and bringing up healthy babies, they bring up the world.

"Favorite Prescription" contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant.

Mrs. Axel Eger, of Gordonville, Cape Girardeau, Mo., writes: "I feel it my duty to write to you, perhaps some will see my testimony and be blessed in the same way. This is my fifth child and I have had no trouble with any of them, but the others having died from lack of nourishment, so the doctor said. I was not sick in any way and did not feel any pain. I took your prescription. I took nine bottles and to my surprise my baby was born in 10 minutes and was fine a little boy. He is now five months old, has never been sick a day and is as strong as anybody who sees him wonders at him. He is a healthy, strong, happy baby. I would like to see this in print for so many have asked me about it. I am sure it is safe for the people, or has Dr. Pierce just made them up and printed them?"

Most of them, like the Afghans and Sikhs in the northwest and the Gurkhas in the northeast, were originally our enemies, and it is the mutual respect born of many a hard tussle that has led to the excellent relations subsisting between Native forces and the British.

It was in 1814 that we first made their acquaintance and learnt what manner of people we had to deal with. During the attack on Kalanga in that year, the garrison of 1,000 men, under Dr. Gourkha, repelled a British force of 2,000. Gourkha, an entire British division, killing Gen. Gillespie, and putting 31 other officers and 750 men out of action. When a two days' bombardment ultimately led them to abandon the post, the survivors, 90 in number, cut their way through the troops, and made good their escape. They were soon retaken, while division for a month.

During the same siege a British force of 1,000 men, under Dr. Gourkha, came out through the fire of our batteries waving his hand. The fire was stopped, and then it transpired that he had had his lower jaw shattered, and had come out to see if he dressed and bound up, he was attended to, and as soon as he was dressed and bound up, he principally asked—and needless to say, obtained—permission to return to his own people, and fight against us again.

In the cases of both classes of hill tribes, both the Gurkhas and the Afghans, fighting is a natural instinct.

They fight as the British take part in field sports—it is as much a part of their being and is understood in just the same happy-go-lucky, dare-devil spirit.

"QUO VADIS.

Scenes and Characters Take us Into Roman World.

"Quo Vadis," the masterpiece of Henry Sienkiewicz, dramatized by Chas. W. Chase, will be produced at Holland's Opera House on the evening of November 12. The scenes and characters of the play take us into the Roman world and the Roman atmosphere at the time of Rome's splendid decadence and this is historically interesting. We have Nero the fat emperor, crazed by the abundance of power-poetaster, musician and tiger—We have Pompeia, wily, snake-like, lustful. We have the noble, high-souled Pretorius, the cringing, vengeful, yet repentant Greek philosopher, Chilo; Ursus, the fair-haired mighty-limbed barbarian, and Lygia, the Christian maiden, the Apostle Peter and a hint of the court whose magnificent dissolution and inexhaustible resources of lust and crime have been the astonishment of the world. And we have the exhausted enthusiasm of the Christian martyrs, their inspired and steadfast faith.

We see the torture of the martyrs and the cruelty of the imperial court and the doom in the arena, all of which carry the audience back with deep and overpowering impressions to the strength and triumph of the early Christian Church. Aiden Benedict has spent a vast amount of money on the production, the scenery and costumes being not only historically correct, but alike beautiful and appropriate. The company is said to be a most excellent one throughout, and without a or ordinary actor in it. The clergy, the press and public, wherever the company have played, pronounce the play one of the greatest moral lessons and grandest instruments of good, that has ever been produced on any stage.

DEATH FROM HAZING.

Thomas Finlay Brown Fatally Injured at the Porter Military Academy.

Charleston, S. C., Nov. 4.—Thomas Finlay Brown, 12 years old, is dead from injuries received while being hazed at the Porter Military Academy last Monday. Brown was new at the academy and the older boys, following their former custom dropped him into a cemented swimming basin twelve feet deep. The basin was dry at the time and the lad received internal injuries from the fall. Before he died he did not give the names of the cadets who had ill-treated him and it is said no action will be taken in the matter.
